280 Israeli General, Moshe Dayan, in his address to the Technion, Haifa, Ha'azret April 1969:
"Jewish villages arose replacing Arab villages. You don't even know the names and I don't blame you. Because these geography books are already no more. Not only the books, but also the (Arab) villages are no more. Nahlat (Dayan's Jewish village) arose replacing Mahilot (an Arab village), and Gevat arose replacing Jibla, and Sarid arose replacing Khirnafas and Kfar Yehoshua replacing Tal Shuman. There is not a single (Jewish) place that did not arise in place of what was an established Arab community."
